Miss May then showed the reporter about her cosy and elegant little studio, which she has taken great pains to make attractive and tasteful. Situated on the third floor, with every advantage of light, well ventilated and in a good location, it is ppointments are in exceeding good taste, nd, with the easels, plaster casts—among them a fine torso of the famous Venus of Milo-pictures, decorated screens and rich curtains, the studio presents a truly artistic appearance. Miss May was very kind, and spent quite a while in pointing out what she considered her best works, the circumstances under which they were painted, and in amusing reminiscences and anectables of her experience abroad, explaining in the meanwhile a large number of sketches from life and nature, made durther the one side, and those of Tilden, Thurman, Bayard and Cleveland on the other, were sufficient to settle the minds of the wavering voters in this contest. Col. Young's remarks in reference to the tariff were such as to carry conviction to the minds of his hearers. Skillfully avoiding statistical exhibits, which generally weary the average andience, he presented a long list of articles, and contrasted in impressive language the tariff duties on the one side, and nem a fine torso of the famous Venus of ing in the meanwhile a large number of sketches from life and nature, made during her travels. The most striking pictures in the collection are an old man and an old woman, which, from an artistic stand-point are real gems, and will repay a critical examination. A pair of crayon por-treits is another noticeable feature. The copies from Murillo, Bartoni, Corregio and Carlo Dolci occupy prominent places on the walls and are line specimens of drawng and coloring, but even the best copy-ng is no test of true artistic strength, and what is most to be appreciated in Miss May's collection is the strong, hold,

He then reviewed the records of the two Demo-cratic candidates, whom he pronounced eminently worthy to be at the head of the greatest nation on the civilized globe. He paid a glowing tribute to the sterling character of Gov. Cleveland, his record as a reformer and his enormous capacity for sustained mental labor. and cannot, therefore, answer the require and cannot, therefore, answer the requirement of the act of Congress.

The following are the head notes of Judge Hammond's opinion.

First—The Probate Court of Shelby county, Tenn., under the code, section 316 h, has no common law jurisdiction, and is not, therefore, authorized to take a declaration of intertion by an alice to become tion of intention by an alien to become citizen of the United States under Revised Statutes, 2165. Second—Neither its jurisdiction to allot ower nor that over bastardy and bastards is a "common law jurisdiction" in the sense of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Third-Whatever may be said of any Third—Whatever may be said of any other statutes passed in England before our revolution, the act of 18 Eliz. charter as a concerning bastard, which is the foundation of the legislation in Tennessee, was never a part of the common law of North Carolina or Tennessee, and will not, therefore, support any claim for common law jurisdiction in the Probate Court of Shelby county.

of Shelby county. Great things have ever hinged on trifles. The first family difficulty on rec-ord was caused by an apple core; the last we heard of was the negligence of a father to keep up the supply of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup when all hands had a cold. A NGERONA LODGE, No.168, F. and
